A Stiffed City.

[From the New York Times.] The bald statement of the range in the shade of the thermometer for the past three days, conveys but a faint idea of the blistering heat upon the city, of the stifling atmosphere that weighed upon it. The days were the hottest of the year, and the succeeding rights were exceptional and terrible in discomfort. The days baked the City—the nights scorched it:

As evening came on the heat grew more powerful, and night came bringing torture instead of relief. There was no relief. There was no reliet anywhere. On the housetops or in the cellars; in the densest part of Baxter street or upon the piers stretching into the soundless, glassy river was heat, all prevading, all-prostrating. Men eschewed the conventionalities of life-flung neck ties, collars, vests and coats angrily away and searched wildly for something cool. The ladies stirred not beyond the precincts of home and the devices they adopted can be imagined but not stated. Children wailed with extreme discomfort and with a seeming dread of something worse; horses fell prone and lifeless on the streets.

Evening business came to a stand-still save about the soda-fountains and in the ice cream saloons. Driven to desperate extremities men swallowed these in sheer despair, but without hoping for the relief that did not come. Whoever could walked and avoided the street car ovens; whoever was forced to take a stage clambered to the roof, and these vehicles went up and down Broadway, crowded on top and empty inside. A few desperate people entered the theatres, allured by the placard: is the coolest place of amusement in the City.' The announcement was cool enough and there was a hope that some of its frigidity might have permeated the auditoriums.

To many homes of honest toil the torrid days brought disaster and wailing. Strong men went out in the morning to do strenuous battle for daily bread and with the evening came not home. The missing ones were found in the wards of the hospitals gasping, unconscious, or already dead.

Opinions of a Prussian Executioner. Reindel, the Prussian headsman, lives in a very fine house in the neighborhood of Havelberg, and is well off, but his neighbors studiously refrain from holding any intercourse with him. He says he never yet met with a criminal who was to be beheaded but whose courage finally gave way. He thinks hanging would be a better mode of execution, nearly every criminal being afraid of the pain which they think the axe, in cutting off their heads, would give them. He says the most trying moment for him is always that of his confronting his victim for the first time for the purpose of looking at his neck and cutting off his hair. All the women whom he beheaded, he says, fainted as soon as they caught sight of him and learned who he was and what he wanted of them. He denounces as a wanton cruelty the practice of reading oncemore to the criminal the whole long sentence passed upon him atter he has reached the scaffold. He thinks that there is still sensibility in the head for several minutes after it has been severed from the trunk. A woman beheaded in Mecklenburg in 1866 had fainted on the scaffold, and seemed perfectly lifeless when she was tied to the block. After her head head was off he picked it up, and saw to his horror that the eyes opened slowly, with an expression of great

He thinks the most humane way of executing criminals would be to kill them in an hour or an hour and a halt after their sentence has been announced to them, and not compel them to walk or ride to a distant place of execution, but to execute them, if possible, in their own prison; for the walk to the scaffold, he says, is always a dreadful torture for the criminal few of the strongest men being able to retain their composure, while the women, without exception, have to be carried to the block .-Occasionally, he says, feeble women arouse themselves at the last moment and offer the most desperate resistance, so that he and his assistants once or twice were hardly able to fasten them to the block.

PARENTS AND CHILDREN.-Dr. Wayland, in his work on Moral Science, makes use of a remark capable of much wider application than he has given it: "A parent who assiduously follows his children throughout the various steps of their education will find his own knowledge increased, and his own education carried forward vastly beyond what he would have conceived possible. There are very few things which a child ought to learn from the study of which an adult will not derive great advantage, especially if he goes through the process of simplification and analysis, which is so necessary to communicate knowledge to the young. A parent's superiority cannot be retained, if, as soon as he enters upon active business, he desist from all effort after intellectual cultivation, and surrenders himself a slave to physical labor, while he devotes his child to mere mental cultivation, and thus renders intellectual intercourse between himself and his children impossible."

DISCOVERED ISLANDS IN THE PACIFIC OCEAN.—The Secretary of the Navy sent a communication to the Senate on Monday in reply to a resolution in relation to the discovery, occupation and character of the Midway Islands in the Pacific Ocean. The islands, he says, were discovered by Capt. N. C. Brooks, commander of the Hawaiian bark Gambia, in July 1859. In May, 1867, the Secretary of the Navy directed Capt. Wm. Reynolds, commander of the steamer Lackawanna, to take possession, which he did on the 13th of September last. Capt. Reynolds in his report describes the harbor as formed very much like Honolulu, as rather more sate, but with not quite as much depth of water on its bar, which, however, appeared to be about eighteen feet. Water was found on the islands at a distance of from four to seven feet. The soil will produce a good many kinds of vegetables, Call and see them. any choice fish are found in the vicinity.

ORGANIC WEAKNESS

Immediately cured and full vigor restored. This distressing affection, which renders life miserable and marriage impossible, is the penalty paid by the victims of impropriety.—
Young persons are too apt to commit excesses from not being aware of the dreadful consequences that may ensue. Now, who that understands the subject will pretend to deny that the power of procreation is lost sooner by those falling into improper habits than by the prudent? Besides being deprived of the pleasure of healthy offspring, the most serious and destructive symptoms of both body and mind arise. The System becomes deranged, the Physical and Mental Functions Weakened, Loss of Procreative Power, Nervous Irritability, Dyspepsia, Palpitation of the Heart, Indi-gestion, Constitutional Debility, and Wasting of the Frame, Consumption, Decay and Death.

TAKE PARTICULAR NOTICE.

Dr. J. addresses all those who have injured themselves by improper indulgence and soli-tary habits, which ruin both body and mind, unfitting them for either business, study, society or marriage. These are some of the sad and melancholy effects produced by early habits of youth, viz: Weakness of the Back and Limbs, Pains in the Head, Dimness of Sight, Loss of Muscular Power, Palpitation of the Heart, Dyspepsia, Nervous Irritability, Derangement of the Digestive Functions, General Debility, Symptoms of Consumption, &c. MENTALLY.—The fearful effects on the mind are much to be dreaded. Loss of Memory, Confusion of Ideas, Depression of Spirits, Evil Forebodings, Averson to Society, Self Distrust, Love of Solitude, Timidity, &c., are some of

Thousands of persons of all ages can now judge what is the cause of their declining health, losing their vigor, becoming weak, pale, nervous and emaciated, having a singular appearance about the eyes, Cough, and Symptoms of Consumption. YOUNG MEN, Who have injured themselves by a certain practice, indulged in, a habit frequently learned from evil companions, or at school, the effects of which are nightly felt, even when asleep, and, if not cured, renders marriage impossible, and destroys both mind and body, should apply immediately.

What a pity that a young man, the hope of his country, the pride of his parents, should be snatched from all prespects and enjoyments of life by the consequence of deviating from the life by the consequence of deviating from the path of nature, and indulging in a certain secret habit. Such persons must, before contem-

MARRIAGE, effect that a sound mind and body are the most necessary requisites to promote connubial happiness. Indeed, without these the journey through life becomes a weary pilgrimage; the prospect hourly darkens to the view, the mind becomes shadowed with despair and filled with the melancholy reflection that the happiness of another becomes blighted with your own.
